Make healthy home design and construction the standard in New York

Resilient, sustainable healthy homes are the future of residential new construction. Now is the time to expand your capacity to develop and deliver carbon-neutral homes and neighborhoods to home buyers seeking a cleaner, healthier living environment.

Carbon-neutral homes create healthier indoor air quality by using efficient, high-performing energy sources, including renewables, to significantly reduce emissions—especially important for those suffering from asthma and allergies. NYSERDA is partnering with the New York State Home Builders Association and the Asthma and Allergy Foundation of America to deliver the Building Better Homes – Emissions Free and Healthier Communities program to help advance carbon-neutral home and neighborhood development.

Become a local leader in carbon-neutral home development

As a participating new home builder or developer, NYSERDA will work with you to modernize and decarbonize your design and construction approach for delivering high-quality, reliable carbon-neutral homes. Funding is available for resources, support, and training to expand and improve your building practices and help position your firm as a local leader in carbon-neutral and healthy home development.

Through the program, you will have access to:

- Carbon-neutral home design or redesign support
- Professional consultation services support
- Carbon-neutral marketing plan support
- Carbon-neutral model home incentive
- Publicity through NYSERDA's website at nyscrda.ny.gov
