How do you protect your child's financial future?

What is Child Identity Theft?

- The practice of stealing a child's personal information to fraudulently obtain goods, property, credit, utility services, employment or government documents
- Can damage your child's long-term finances, credit history and reputation

Why are children targeted?

- There is no way for companies to verify the name and birthdate attached to a child's unused social security number.
- Thieves can attach a clean social security number to any name and birthdate they desire.
- Children are 35x more likely to become victims of identity theft than adults.

What are some of the warning signs of child identity theft?

- Your child receives offers for pre-approved credit cards in the mail or collection calls about accounts you didn't authorize.
- You find an existing credit report under your child's name.
- You may obtain written notices from the IRS stating your child has not paid income taxes or that your child's social security number was used on another tax return.
- Receive a request for employment verification when your child is unemployed and a minor.
- Turned down for government benefits or even student loans because the benefits are being paid to another account using your child's social security number.

How does child identity theft occur?

- Some thieves predict a social security number, other purposely aim to steal a particular number.
- Most parents have a limited need for their child's social security besides school paperwork or tax purposes. This "gap" leaves your child vulnerable for almost 18 years!
- Thieves know the gaps in the system and exploit it.
- It is not until the child applies for credit for the first time that the child's social security number is introduced to the credit reporting agencies.
- After setting up one account, thieves can open other accounts until it is time to cash out.

Who are the thieves?

- Financial opportunists who see this as a “victimless crime”
- Parents, guardians and family members who use a child’s social security to overcome hardships or just extend their credit options

What can you do to prevent child identity theft?

Prevent, Detect and Resolve it!

Prevent:

- Keep birth certificates, social security numbers and other sensitive information locked away.

- Only provide your child's social security number when absolutely necessary and always ask why and how will it be used.

- Shred paper with sensitive information instead of discarding it.
- Talk to your child about internet safety and securing personal information online.
- Review the websites your family uses and monitor submission of personal information.

Place a Security Freeze

- In NYS you can place a freeze on your child's social security number as soon as they have one and your child's social will remain frozen until the age of 16.
- You must notify the credit bureaus individually and begin a "protected consumer" freeze with each one.
- Certain bureaus charge for the freeze and others (Equifax) do not but ALL bureaus must be contacted in order for the freeze to be effective.

How does a freeze protect my child's identity?

- Prevents anyone from opening a credit account in your child's name.
- Prevents credit bureaus from releasing your child's credit report to third parties.

What can you do to prevent child identity theft?

Prevent, Detect and Resolve it!

Detect:

- Ask for a credit report under your child's name and social security number through www.annualcreditreport.com.
- If no report exists – ask for a manual search of your child's credit report under just your child's social security number.

NOTE: Checking for a credit report alone under your child's name, social security number and birthdate is not always enough since thieves can use a different name under your child's social security number.

What can you do to prevent child identity theft?

Prevent, Detect and Resolve it!

Resolve it!

- If you notice fraudulent activities on your child's credit report, don't waste time, contact the three credit bureaus immediately.
- Contact every business where your child's information was misused and ask to close the fraudulent account and flag it to show it is a result of identity theft.
- File an identity theft report with the Federal Trade Commission.

Remember, you can place a freeze on your child's social security number.
