

Are you planning on hiring workers in 2016?

Solar Ready Vets might be the answer if you are interested in interviewing job candidates who have experience working in teams, can follow orders, are physically fit, and accustomed to working in all kinds of weather. While in the Army these candidates worked toward developing disciplined work habits and are now excited about pursuing opportunities offered in the solar industry. Many have management experience, while others like working with their hands. Some have experience with electrical and power systems.

Candidates with these attributes will be available for interviews with your companies on February 16 and 17 at Fort Drum. The first class of Solar Ready Vets from Fort Drum, Watertown, NY will graduate having received an intensive 5-week training that includes: tested classroom PV training; hands-on training; the OSHA 30-hour course, and attainment of NABCEP EL.

These veterans are leaving the Army and transitioning to civilian life, bringing their mission-oriented approach to new careers after serving in the military. A resume book containing information on all of the candidates is available upon request.

For more information or to request a copy of the resume book and schedule an interview with a Solar Ready Vet at Fort Drum, please contact Mike Stangl or Vicki Colello.
